If those who be in authority were sure of the guilty parties, they would think it an expensive burying ground. Not long since five or six hogs were thrown into the Sandy Lick near the place where the two were found making so much noise, stinkatively speaking.

Accept Our Thanks.

The exchanges that come to this office have given very complimentary notices of the bright, newsy, and neat typographical appearance of THE STAR, and not only our newspaper brethren, but many people of Reynoldsville and elsewhere have kind words to say for the twinkling infant in newspaperdom. For the words of praise we are very grateful, and will endeavor to keep apace with the times that we may always merit the distinction of being worthy a place among our exchanges, and that the people of Reynoldsville and vicinity may appreciate THE STAR to the extent of a years' subscription.

Food given to a hungry man, with words of sympathy and encouragement, can appease the cravings of an appetite where words of sympathy would be of no account, so words of praise accompanied with an order for a years' subscription, advertisement, or job work will go farther in a newspaper office—in fact touch the vitality of the office—than words alone for they are "as sounding brass or a tinkling symbol."

The subscription list is growing. We have subscribers at Washington, D. C., Brooklyn, N. Y., Niagara Falls and Springfield, Mo.

We again say we are thankful to our exchanges and friends for their praise and encouragement.

Get the Western Spirit.

One of the necessary means adapted to the welfare of a town is local pride and zeal. Boston has the reputation of being the "hub of the universe," but every resident of every town and city should consider his own particular home the "hub." It is especially true of the west that local pride builds up the new places and sustains the old. Reynoldsville should be behind no town in this respect. Few places have a larger possibility of growth and prosperity than does our town. We ought to look to the future as well as the present in making plans for building up the interests of Reynoldsville. The proper pride and enterprise on the part of our people would add largely to our population in the immediate future.

Let no town lead us in matters of improvement, let no town lead us in efforts to give employment to labor and build up home industry! Let us get the breezy, progressive western spirit and then, though Reynoldsville may not be the "hub of the universe," we will rejoice in being, figuratively speaking, the fellow; for through we may refuse to believe that "the sun do move," we may discover that we do move—in the right direction—on in growth and success, towards the goal of our fondest desires.

Where Shall it Be?

The location of school building is before the school board and as all the people are, or should be, interested, they should now have their say and then hold their peace. The old Sandy Lick property is one location spoken of, the Logan property, back of the Catholic church, is another. We would venture a wager that eight-tenths of the tax payers would say let us have the present location with its disadvantages to either of the proposed ones with their miasmatic surroundings. To the south of these the town cannot extend on account of swamp and water. To the north of the present location every advantage is now open for building with the very important one of good drainage. It should only be necessary to cite the taxpayers to the extra cost in buying a new location within a stones throw of the one they have. If the people say change, so be it.

A Competent Judge.

Hon. W. O. Smith, editor of the Punksutawney Spirit, and candidate for second term to the Legislature, in noticing the appearance of THE STAR, gives expression to the following in regard to the benefits a town derives from a newspaper. A man who has the ability that Hon. Smith has knows whereof he speaks:

"The first number indicates that the merchants intend to patronize it. And they should. Reynoldsville is one of the largest and best towns in the county, and there is plenty of room for two good papers there. There is no better way to help your town than to sustain your home newspapers, for good newspapers are the soul of a live town. They attract enterprises to it and bring trade to the merchants. They set forth its advantages, and induce people to become residents. By helping your local newspapers you help yourself, and it is your duty to support them."

K. O. T. M.

A Special Election.

A notice to voters of the Borough of Reynoldsville of an election to be held in June to increase the indebtedness of the school fund of the Borough, will be found in this issue of THE STAR.

Want a Reynoldsville Minister.

Dr. Wm. A. Pifer, of Philadelphia, editor of the American Mechanic Advocate, the founder of the first Odd Fellows' Home in America, also a Grand Chaplain in one of the high degrees in the Masonic lodge, spent Sunday at Hotel McConnell. He has traveled through Europe and other countries. This distinguished gentleman came from Philadelphia as a representative of a large Presbyterian church in the city of Brotherly Love, for the express purpose of hearing Rev. H. G. Furbay, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Reynoldsville preach, and investigate the standing of the reverend gentleman with a view of giving him a call as pastor of their church. Dr. Pifer came to town unannounced and Rev. Furbay was first apprised of his presence when he discovered him sitting in his congregation Sunday morning when about to announce his text.

Dr. Pifer informed a representative of THE STAR Monday morning that the Philadelphia church would give Rev. Furbay a call. Also stated that the church property is very valuable, the congregation numbers 250 members, and they pay their pastor $2,800 per year.

Whether the Presbyterians of this place will lose their pastor or not, time will reveal. Rev. Furbay does not state whether he would accept a call if one were given him from this congregation. He has the ability to fill a city pulpit.

Merchants' Protective Association.

Twenty-five business men of Reynoldsville are members of the Merchants' Protective Association. This association was organized just recently and meets the second Tuesday evening of each month. The object of this organization is to protect the merchants from that class of people who buy and never pay, or, in other words, "professional dead beats." The names of those who refuse to pay their account are sent into the association and the delinquents are notified by the association to call and settle the amount or make satisfactory arrangements for the settlement of the same. This notice is repeated several times and if no attention is paid to it then the name of the non-payer is placed on the black list which is issued every sixty days and a copy sent to each member of the association. Thus each business man is made acquainted with those who refuse to pay their bills. A penalty of twenty dollars is imposed upon any member of the association who gives such persons credit. When a man asks for credit the merchant gets his list, looks it over and if the name of the one who seeks credit appear thereon, he is informed that the list of creditors of that establishment is as long as they wish to make it, hence no credit is granted to follow who will not pay. If all Reynoldsville merchants were to join this association the "professional dead beats" would be driven out of the town and business men be more successful and customers buy their goods for less money.

A $2,000 Wreck.

A wreck occurred on the R. & F. C. R. R. above Prescottville at one o'clock Tuesday morning that might have cost some one their life, but fortunately no one was injured. The train was composed of 52 loaded cars coming down from Big Soldier when a brake beam dropped down, throwing the car next to the engine off the track, running some distance on the ties until a culvert was reached and the car was thrown entirely out of the train. The train was uncontrollable and ran along until almost all the cars had passed the one thrown off at the culvert, when the front part of the train began jumping the track until eight cars were badly jammed and broken up. The wreck will cost the company in the neighborhood of $2,000. Supt. Mellinger was on the scene of the wreck early with a gang of men clearing the track, but Big Soldier and the New Hamilton mines were idle yesterday.

Escaped From Jail.

On Saturday the Chief of Police of Reynoldsville received a postal card from G. W. McNeese, sheriff of Armstrong county, giving the following description of three prisoners who had escaped from the Kittanning jail Friday night, May 20th, 1892, offering a reward for their arrest:

Charles Danielson, small man, about 30 years old, dark complected, short black beard; one of his arms tattooed with lady's picture. Austin Cline small, smooth-faced, light complected, and about 18 years old; also has tattoo marks on one of his arms. Wm. Sarver, small man, smooth face, and about 20 or 25 years old.

Cline was re-captured at Brady's Bend Sunday evening.

Cards of Thanks.

We wish to express our gratitude to the people of Reynoldsville and DuBois for kind words, acts and sympathy extended to us during our recent bereavement, hoping that amidst their hours of sadness they may find kind and sympathizing friends.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT BONE.

We are thankful to all who were so kind and helpful during the illness and death of our little daughter, Villa.

MR. AND MRS. ANDY DENNY.

AN EVENING TRIP.

Thirty-five People Explore the Big Soldier Mine.

Last Thursday evening a party numbering thirty-five, composed of the ladies of the Utopia Circle and their husbands and a few friends, enjoyed an exceedingly pleasant excursion through the Big Soldier Mine, three miles from Reynoldsville. The excursion was given by Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Brown in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Elliott, of Mansfield, Pa., who are their guests.

At 7:30 an engine and coach on the R. & F. C. R. R. was in waiting for the excursionists at the Company store, and a few minutes after that hour the iron horse was speeding along towards the mines. On arriving at Big Soldier there the party found nine coal cars that had been lined with new boards, with three seats in each car, divided into three sections, two long eared animals attached to each section, ready for the trip "underneath the ground."

A distance of 2,500 feet in the mine was reached without any mishap, but a few narrow escapes by those who were a little tardy about obeying the command of "down heads!" Supt. Geo. Mellinger, Civil Engineer F. M. Brown and assistant, R. V. Pratt, and Mine Boss, Richard Smith, were with the party and acted as guides. The party left the coal mine coaches and walked some distance to see the iron-man, the old Harrison mining machine, digging coal. This machine is operated by one man and receives its strength from compressed air that is piped into the mine for power.

From that point the party retraced their short walk and crossed the main entrance and visited a large pump used to keep the water out of the mine, which also receives its power from the compressed air. This pump was doing double service, forcing the water out of the mine and manufacturing ice at the same time, on a small scale.

Some of the fair sex were very timid. One of the ladies in going through a room was afraid to touch one of the props, fearing the hill would fall upon the party. The outward trip was made, no one being any the worse for the exploration of the mine, barring the difficulty some found in getting the kinks out of their necks.

The party then visited the large engine that keeps the pipes in the mine filled with compressed air and that keeps the large fans in rapid motion to furnish ventilation necessary for the men who work in the mine. The engine and coach started on the homeward trip with the excursionists. Mr. and Mrs. Brown had not forgotten the old saying, "The way to people's hearts I find, is through their mouths, or I mistake mankind," for a supply of fruit had been provided and was passed around. Arriving at the company store they then visited the general office of the company and were shown some of the maps of the Company's mines and lands. The largest map was a master piece of civil engineer work that had been done by F. M. Brown. This map alone cost something over $2,000.

It was in the civil engineer's office that a mischief-maker conceived the idea of rubbing his dirty fingers across the face of a lady who was standing near him. The party up to this time were comparatively clean, but after the first black mark was made the greasy end of a mine lamp was frequently touched by fair fingers and a lively time ensued and a dirty looking crowd left the office.

Those who had charge of the excursion vied with each other in trying to make the trip an enjoyable one. All returned to their homes with expression of thankfulness to Mr. and Mrs. Brown for the pleasant evening and pleasure of such a trip.

Last Sad Rites.

The funeral services of John Bone were held in the M. E. church Thursday afternoon and the seating capacity of the building was not sufficient to accommodate all who desired to remain for the services, and a number were compelled to stand. Rev. W. P. Murray conducted the services in the church and at the cemetery, the I. O. O. F. performed their ceremony over the earthly remains of one who had been united with them in the fraternal bonds of "Friendship, Love and Truth." The interment took place in the Pleasant Avenue cemetery.

The floral contributions were beautiful, and were formed into a cross and pillow. The cross was presented by Will H. Bell, of this place, and the pillow was a token of the esteem and love of a number of DuBois friends of the deceased.

The mines were all closed to give the men an opportunity to follow the remains of a fellow laborer to their last resting place.

This young man who was so suddenly called upon to try the realities of the vast eternal world, was soon to be married to Miss Emma Lee, of Durham, Washington.

Only One New Building.

The school board, composed of six members, Dr. King, Dr. Neale, Dr. Alexander, George Mellinger, David Wheeler and John Fink, met at Dr. Neale's office Saturday evening and decided to build one school house in Reynoldsville, to contain from 10 to 12 rooms, to be built of brick, and to be erected on vacant lots below the Catholic church. The cost of the building will be decided later.
